水 Water — the Ocean

Big-picture and free-flowing, your curiosity has no shoreline. You think in systems and see connections early. In relationships you are generous and open-minded; you need a partner who offers direction — a shoreline, not a dam.

1 • Elemental makeup • 五行构成

Counting the five elements across all stems and branch essences shows what runs strong through your chart — and what runs quiet.

Elena

Elena's chart leans Wood — the strongest thread running through the pillars — with Fire the quietest. Read the dominant element as home turf: the kind of energy Elena reaches for without thinking. The day master is the lens; this is the weather around it. The quietest element is not a flaw and nothing is "missing" — it is simply the gear shifted into less naturally, the part of life that asks for more conscious attention.

2 • The eight characters • 八字逐字

HOW TO READ THIS PAGE • 阅读指引

Each character is read for its own imagery, then placed in the life domain its pillar governs.

年柱 • Year pillar — roots and early years

月柱 • Month pillar — career path and prime years

日柱 • Day pillar — self and the spouse palace

时柱 • Hour pillar — aspirations and later years

年柱 • Year pillar • 乙亥

乙 Wood — the Vine: flexible and graceful; finds a way around any wall.

亥 Water — early winter (Pig): deep winter water; reflective, recharges in quiet.

Vine-like adaptability colors your roots and early years, with reflective depth underneath.

月柱 • Month pillar • 戊寅

戊 Earth — the Mountain: solid and dependable; the ground others build on.

寅 Wood — early spring (Tiger): first green breaking through; bold new starts.

Mountain-like dependability colors your career path and prime years, with bold new beginnings underneath.

日柱 • Day pillar • 壬申

壬 Water — the Ocean: vast and free-flowing; thinks in horizons.

申 Metal — early autumn (Monkey): harvest blade; clever, decides fast.

Ocean-like breadth colors your self and the spouse palace, with clever resolve underneath.

时柱 • Hour pillar • 乙巳

乙 Wood — the Vine: flexible and graceful; finds a way around any wall.

巳 Fire — early summer (Snake): heat rising; quick-witted, moves fast.

Vine-like adaptability colors your aspirations and later years, with quick-witted heat underneath.

3 • 壬水 up close • 壬水近观

The portrait gave you the shape of your day master. Here's the texture — how it tends to show up in strengths, in friction, at work, and with people.

from 壬水 Water — your day master, fixed by your birth day; everything else in the chart is read against it

Strengths • 优势

- You see the whole board. Systems, patterns, the way things connect — your mind naturally works at the level others have to strain for.
- You're adaptable without losing yourself. Like water taking the shape of its container, you fit new situations fast.
- You're generous with ideas and with spirit. Your curiosity has no shoreline, and it pulls interesting people toward you.

Growth edges • 成长点

- Scatteredness: everything connects, so everything tempts. Depth in one river beats width across ten streams.
- Avoiding commitment: you keep options open so long the moment passes. Some doors only open to people who knock firmly.

At work • 工作中

You're the strategist and the connector — the one who sees how the pieces fit before anyone else does. You need a shoreline, not a dam: enough structure to give your flow direction, not so much it stops the current. Partner with finishers; your gift is the map, theirs is the march.

In relationships • 感情中

You're open-minded and generous — easy to talk to, hard to pin down. You need a partner who offers direction the way a shoreline offers direction: a shape to move against, not a cage. Name what you want before the current carries you past it; drifting is only freedom if you chose the river.

4 • Your Ten Gods • 十神

Beyond the day master, your chart describes the people and forces around you through the Ten Gods — the classical vocabulary for roles like supporter, challenger, resource, and outlet. They say less about what happens to you and more about how you relate to what happens.

Year stem	乙	Maverick • 伤官
Year branch	亥	Peer • 比肩
Month stem	戊	Challenger • 七杀
Month branch	寅	Creator • 食神
Day branch	申	Sage • 偏印
Hour stem	乙	Maverick • 伤官
Hour branch	巳	Venturer • 偏财

01 Maverick • 伤官 ×2 — year stem, hour stem
Originality and edge — brilliance that resists the rules.

The Maverick is your sharpest, least obedient talent: the idea nobody asked for, said better than anyone expected. It brings originality and verbal precision, and it chafes at hierarchy — being managed closely drains it fast. Give it problems worth solving and room to solve them its own way. Its growth edge is diplomacy: the insight is usually right; the delivery decides whether anyone listens.

02 Peer • 比肩 — year branch
Yourself, reflected — siblings, friends, equals.

The Peer is you in plural: people who meet you as equals and expect the same back. It gives independence and a strong sense of self, and it asks for teamwork — peers multiply your strength but compete for the same air. In work, lean into partnerships where credit is shared openly. In relationships, it favors bonds built on mutual respect rather than rescue.

03 Creator • 食神 — month branchExpression and enjoyment — talent made visible, appetite for life.

The Creator is your expressive engine: talent, taste, humor, the ability to make things people enjoy. It favors steady output over dramatic breakthroughs — the craftsperson's god, not the gambler's. Protect time for making things with no audience in mind; that is where it recharges. Its caution is comfort: pleasure is fuel, but only when it doesn't become the whole journey.

04 Venturer • 偏財 — hour branchWindfall energy — opportunity, generosity, appetite for the new.

The Venturer governs money that arrives sideways: opportunities, bonuses, ideas that monetize unexpectedly. It brings generosity and a nose for openings, and its weakness is restlessness — chasing the next thing before the last one pays. Treat windfalls as seed capital, not income: invest them in skills or buffers. In relationships it is warm and giving; just watch the impulse to impress.

05 Challenger • 七杀 — month stemPressure that forges — discipline, courage under fire.

The Challenger is pressure with a purpose: deadlines, standards, the voice that says you are capable of more. It forges discipline and nerve, and it demands an outlet — without one, pressure turns inward as tension. Seek demanding environments voluntarily: hard training, ambitious projects, honest feedback. Its gift is resilience; its rule is simple — pressure you choose builds you, pressure you avoid owns you.

06 Sage • 偏印 — day branchUnconventional wisdom — intuition, niche mastery, the inner library.

The Sage is knowledge gathered off the beaten path: the obscure skill, the intuition you can't source, the subject you know better than your job title suggests. It favors depth over credentials — mastery that doesn't need a certificate. Its fuel is curiosity; its trap is withdrawal, learning instead of living. Put the strange expertise to work on one real problem and it stops being a hobby and starts being an edge.

The loudest voice among them is the Maverick — Originality and edge — brilliance that resists the rules. Read the set above as a cast of characters, not a verdict: these are the roles you naturally attract and slip into. The charts that age best belong to people who can tell which role they are playing in the moment — and choose it on purpose.

5 • The tensions in your chart • 命盘的张力

A chart with no friction is a flat chart. Yours has live wires — pairs of drives that pull in opposite directions. This isn't a flaw to fix; it's where your energy actually lives. The dim line under each title names the exact stars that reading comes from — so you can always see the math behind the words.

Independence × Recognition • 独立 × 被看见

from 比肩 Peer ×1 • 食神 Creator ×1 • 伤官 Maverick ×2

"You resist being managed — yet you care deeply about whether your work gets recognized."

The synthesis — Give the independent part what it needs — real autonomy — then choose one stage on purpose. Recognition lands when you decide where to be seen, not when you chase it.

Freedom × Structure • 自由 × 结构

from 食神 Creator ×1 • 伤官 Maverick ×2 • 七杀 Challenger ×1

"You want autonomy — but your strongest growth comes when something gives your energy a clear boundary."

The synthesis — Don't pick a side. Put the wild energy inside a container you chose: a deadline you set, a craft you commit to. Structure you choose feels like freedom; structure imposed feels like a cage.

6 • The five elements, one by one • 五行逐解

Counts are only the start — here's what each element is actually doing in your particular chart, and one practice for working with it.

- 01 Wood • 木 • 3 — strong thread • year stem, month branch, hour stem Ideas multiply fast here — growth, initiative, the urge to start things. The gift is momentum; the tax is a trail of half-grown projects. Finish one thing completely before planting the next, and this becomes your engine instead of your clutter.
- 02 Fire • 火 • 1 — quiet • hour branch
Recognition won't come looking for you, so go meet it halfway. Share the work before it feels ready, speak one beat earlier than comfortable. Quiet fire still warms — it just needs to be carried into the room.
- 03 Earth • 土 • 1 — quiet • month stem
Grounding is a practice for you, not a given. Anchor the day deliberately: a fixed morning, a real meal, a room that stays in order. Small stabilities compound into the calm that other people assume you were born with.
- 04 Metal • 金 • 1 — quiet • day branch
Decisions benefit from scaffolding — lists, pros and cons, a single next action written down. Don't wait for certainty; clarity comes from deciding, not from thinking. Borrow structure from tools and people until it's a habit.
- 05 Water • 水 • 2 — steady • year branch, day stem
You reflect enough to stay oriented without drowning in it. Protect a little unstructured time each week — walks, quiet mornings — that's where your best thinking actually happens.

Your dynamics • 相生相克

Feeds you • 生我

Metal people are your source — their clarity feeds your depth.

You feed • 我生

You pour into Wood people — your care becomes their growth.

You check • 我克

You cool Fire's blaze — the calm to their storm. Natural sparring partners.

Checks you • 克我

Earth dams your flow — structure keeps you channeled. Useful, occasionally irritating.

7 • Where it shows up • 落在实处

The same chart, read through three lenses of daily life — built from the ten gods that actually appear in your pillars.

Work

from 食神 Creator ×1 • 伤官 Maverick ×2

Your chart is built for making things — ideas, objects, performances, sentences. Output isn't a hobby here; it's the primary way you convert energy into value. Roles that reward originality and visible craft will feel like home; roles that only reward compliance will feel like a cage with good lighting.

Try this: Ship one thing a week, however small. The audience can be three people — the habit matters more than the scale.

Money

from 偏财 Venturer ×1

Money tends to arrive sideways in your chart — opportunities, bonuses, ideas that monetize unexpectedly rather than a straight salary ladder. That's a feature, not a bug, but it needs a container: windfalls without a system evaporate. Treat irregular income as seed capital — skills, buffers, assets — not as spending money.

Try this: Route every windfall by rule before it lands: a fixed split between buffer, growth, and guilt-free spending.

People

from 比肩 Peer ×1

Peers are your element — friends, siblings, rivals, collaborators. You calibrate yourself against equals, which means your circle is your curriculum. Invest in friendships the way others invest in courses: the right five people will teach you more than any program.

Try this: Once a month, spend real time with someone who makes you want to be better. Protect that slot.

8 • Elemental balance • 五行平衡

Roughly 38% of the chart sits in Water and Metal — neither overloaded nor starved, a workable middle.

With support in the middle range, small deliberate nudges matter more than big overhauls — pick one element below and experiment for two weeks.

A balance check from elemental counts — practical, but not the full classical 用神 (the 'useful god' analysis) reading, which also weighs the month's command, combinations, and clashes. Treat the suggestions as experiments — try one for two weeks and notice what shifts.

The generating cycle — each element feeds the next. Your suggested elements are highlighted in the guidance below.

Lean into: Metal — structure from Metal 金 ×1 — Metal feeds your Water

Metal is clarity: boundaries, systems, and the courage to cut what doesn't work.

- Declutter one drawer or folder a week; Metal thinks clearly in clean space.
- Write things down to decide them — lists, pros and cons, a single next action.
- Practice one clean 'no' a week, kindly said and fully kept.

Also nourish: Wood — growth from Wood 木 ×3 — your Water feeds Wood

Wood is beginnings: learning, plans, and things that grow when tended.

- Start one small learning streak — fifteen minutes a morning with a book or a skill, same time daily.
- Put something green where you work: a plant you water yourself, not decoration but a ritual.
- Write the week's plan on paper every Sunday night; Wood likes intentions made visible.

How this was computed • 排盘方法

Year and month pillars switch at the absolute astronomical moment of each solar term (JieQi) — the mainstream convention used by virtually all charting tools, so this report matches what you would get elsewhere for those pillars.

Day and hour pillars use your birthplace's true solar time (longitude plus the equation of time), which is more precise than the civil-clock approximation most free tools use. Daylight-saving transitions are resolved from the IANA timezone database; impossible or ambiguous birth times are flagged, never silently computed.

If the birth time was unknown, the hour pillar is omitted and the analysis rests on three pillars — still meaningful for day-master and elemental reading, lighter on detail.

How to read this report • 阅读指引

Think of this report as a climate study, not a weather forecast: it maps the tendencies in your chart — how you recharge, where friction tends to arise, what kind of work lets you breathe — not fixed outcomes. It cannot predict specific events, and it is not medical, legal, or financial advice. Its value is in testing: hold these pages against your own experience, keep what rings true, argue with the rest.
